APRIL 2020: DONATE LIFE MONTH

TOOLKIT FOR PARTNERS

Donate Life Month is a nationally recognized month focused on raising awareness and engagement for organ, eye and tissue donation. This year’s Donate Life Month theme is ‘Garden of Life’, which symbolizes hope, courage and transformation – themes repeatedly found within the donation journey. We invite you to join us as we plant the seeds of donation by providing education and raising awareness about organ, eye and tissue donation. The stories of those who are waiting, those who have received and those who have given the gift of life, are powerful reminders of the beauty of donation.

This month is important because:

- There are 10,000 children and adults in New York awaiting a lifesaving transplant.
- New York State has an organ shortage due to a low number of registered donors.
- In 2019, approximately 375 New Yorkers died because the transplant they needed did not come soon enough.

This month, let’s come together as a community to encourage New Yorkers to talk with family, friends, coworkers and community networks about organ donation and their wishes.

Below are ways to participate this April, along with select resources to assist you.

DONATE LIFE MONTH ACTIVATION OPTIONS:

- Send an email message to your staff, community and/or constituents
- Publish an article in your newsletter or on your blog
- Host an educational training for your staff, community and/or constituents led by LiveOnNY staff

Did you know that nearly 10,000 children and adults in New York are currently waiting for a lifesaving organ transplant? These are our friends, family, and neighbors and they need our help. On average, 1 New Yorker dies every day because the transplant they needed did not come soon enough.

The Facts About Saving Lives

- Organ donation is often possible even with certain health conditions.
- There is no age limit to be an organ donor - the oldest donor in New York was 93 years old.
- The organ donation process follows strict guidelines to ensure fairness and equity.
- Because organ donation saves lives, most religions celebrate it as a final act of kindness.
- Registering as an organ donor does not change your medical care.

This month, during National Donate Life Month, we come together as a community to raise awareness about the lifesaving power of organ donation, celebrate those who have given the gift of life, and encourage each other to register as organ donors. One person can save up to eight lives and leave a lasting legacy through those who live on because of their generosity.

Meet Angelica
Angelica may look like your typical 19-year-old, though she’s anything but. Yes, she loves to wear makeup, spend time with her boyfriend, and listen to Ariana Grande, but the purse she always wears is not like her other fashion accessories. It carries a heart pump that is keeping her alive while she waits for a lifesaving heart transplant.

When Angelica was just four years old, she was diagnosed with anaplastic large cell lymphoma. It was a terrifying time for her family. Angelica underwent chemotherapy and was in remission for 14 years. In remission, she attended high school, participated in plays, and helped with household chores.

Things took a turn in the summer of 2018 when she was diagnosed with heart failure that her doctors believed was a result of receiving chemotherapy at such a young age. They didn’t think her condition would progress as fast as it did, but soon Angelica was in need of a new heart.

“I felt so sick,” Angelica remembers. “I know it can be a long wait for a transplant and I was worried I wouldn’t live long enough to get my new heart.”

Angelica’s health continued to worsen, and she spent her 19th birthday in the hospital. It wasn’t long before she underwent surgery to implant and Left Vascular Assist Device, also known as an LVAD. The battery-operated pump helps the left side of her heart pump blood throughout her body.

“The LVAD made a huge difference, but I know I won’t be healthy until I get a new heart,” Angelica says. “I don’t have enough energy to go to school and I have to spend a lot of my time at home resting.”

Angelica was listed for a heart transplant in March 2019 and has spent the past year waiting for the call that will save her life. She keeps her cell phone on her at all times and dreams of the day when she can live a more healthy, normal life.

“A new heart would give me a chance to go back to school and move forward with my life,” Angelica says. “It would give me a chance to spend more time with my one-year-old niece. She is the person that keeps me going. I want her to know that she has the strongest aunt in the world. I can’t wait for the day when I have my new heart and I can start to plan for the future.”

This National Donate Life Month, advocate for Angelica and the thousands of New Yorkers like her that are counting on us to say yes to organ donation. One person can save up to eight lives and leave a lasting legacy through those who live on because of their generosity.
